XCentric

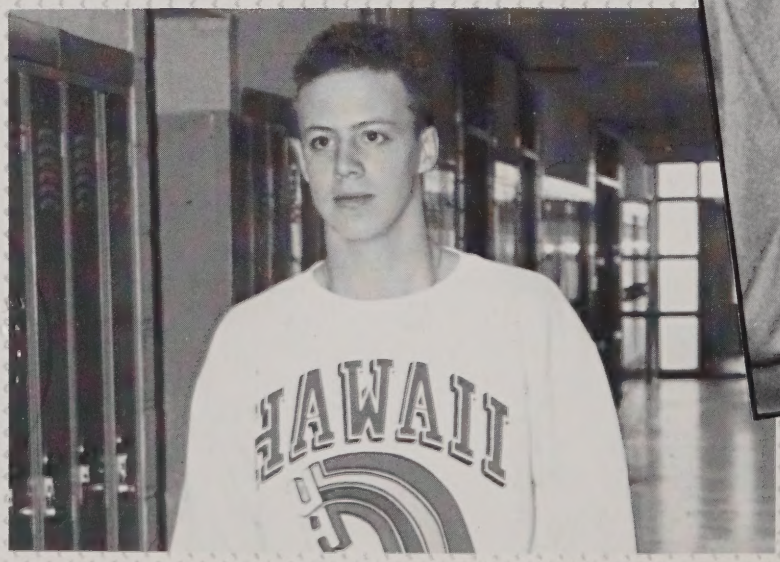
One of the most difficult decisions facing editors of a yearbook is the theme selection. Many ideas are shouted out, considered, and then finally thrown away. This year was no exception.

The summer before school began, this process faced these editors. Finally, after days of stress, headaches, and endless conversations, the perfect theme was found. XCentric! XC, the Roman numeral equivalent of 90, gave this school an exclusive idea for at least one hundred years. This school is made up of individuals. We have an appearance of eccentricity. Combine these together, and we have the 1989-90 Ravelins yearbook, XCentric.



Darryl Miles, voted Best Dressed, displays his eccentric outfit.

Jason Dudley strolls down the senior hall between periods.

David Orne glances in his book for the answer to Mr. Matte's question.

Each year, the editors tackle the word "Ravelins" in an attempt to explain its origin and signifigance. It happened once again this year. After much head scratching and soul searching, this is the 1989-90 definition of Ravelins. It begins with a piece of cloth, which represents the student body. This cloth is, obviously, made up of tiny threads, which now symbolize the individuals at Oxford High School. With each graduating class, it begins to un-"ravel". It is now the incoming students who pick up the pieces and thread their way through high school. With this process, the cloth - Oxford High School - continues to grow and becomes one. At the same time, it houses many separate identities.

Ideas

Thinking . . . one of the very few concepts Infiniti commercials try to inspire, can be very hard to do, especially when really you're trying. Nothing pops in. But, eventually, thought does grow in your brain, like green, fuzzy mold, gnawing on your mentality, devouring brain cells until you expel it from your head, and plunge yourself back into the inconquerable void of vegetation. This can be common problem (not being able to think), and public figures are a perfect example. They're always in trouble, because they don't think! Look at Zsa Zsa Gabor. That took a lot of thought, huh? Or James Brown. In other cases, thought has been profitable. For instance, three cheers for whoever thought of Batman . . . or this new and improved generation of Star Trek . . . or the talking PeeWee Herman doll.

Young people should start thinking about subjects that matter . . . like lowering taxes and the depletion of the ozone layer . . . NOT New Kids on The Block, or the Simpsons. Though things like these may be great, they should not a direct influence on one's life.

Back to thinking . . . It's rough out there. The Japanese have a head start on us, right now because they think small (as in micro). So, it's time America contributed something more than Teenage Turtles and New Kids. THINK about it!

'Round the Table

A cafe study is the perfect chance for students to relax and talk to friends. Often times, these cafe periods appear in the Senior Summaries as a Pride & Joy. People sometimes do their homework, gossip, or just sleep, especially if the cafe is first period in the morning. One could also take advantage of the school breakfast program, having either juice, bagels, danishes, or milk.

Cafe studies lead to fond memories and have started many friendships. It is a great way to socialize and catch up on school work.

The cafeteria lunch program underwent several changes this year, including disposable trays and silverware. The new food being served was met with protest by many students, and on one day the school boycotted. Nearly 600 students brown bagged their lunches.

In addition, students in a Critical Issues class began a recycling program. It was hoped that there would be 100% participation.

Keith Faneuff watches what is unfolding before him.

These students show what a cafe study is all about.

All Together

What is it that everyone has in common? Physical Education is a class that everyone must take. Early in the fall, the 8th and 9th grade girls learn how to play speedball, while the 8th and 9th grade boys play flag football. The sophomores get their first exposure to Project Adventure, while the upperclassmen girls try their hand at archery. The 11th and 12th grade boys play football and speedball.

The coming of the cold weather brought badminton, basketball, and volleyball. Project Adventure took a break, and learned CPR.

In the spring, track and softball were introduced to students. Those in Project Adventure faced even more death defying feats. These gym programs provide the students with a healthy way to relieve tension.

Those of you who have brought this infamous elevator pass, WAIT . . . There is an elevator, but the pass can't be used. Only a key will open the door.

When students returned this year, a noticeable difference was in place at the school. Located off the eighth grade hall, an elevator is now available to those students who are disabled. The work was completed in the summer of '89, after being planned for several years.

Shining Spirit

This year's Homecoming at Oxford High was a great success. It was held on the week of September 27th, and all classes participated in it. On Wednesday, the student body dresses like athletes. Thursday was crazy tie day, where students dressed up with strange ties and showed them to the whole school. Friday we had class color day, where the students dressed up in their class colors.

On Saturday, the Homecoming booths for each class were put into action. Each class, team, and club had great success in selling their items.

And on Saturday night, our football team won their game against Leicester, 46-6. The whole weekend was a great success.

Serving It Up!

One of the most popular athletic activities among students is the game of volleyball. Every gym class, beginning with eighth grade, is taught the fine arts of spiking, serving, and bumping. Many spirited and competitive games have been played throughout the year.

Intramural volleyball has also become extremely popular. After school, the gym instructors have created a tournament. Anyone can play, and there are two leagues; one for the underclassmen, and one for the upperclassmen. In addition, there is an all-star contest, where the Seniors play against the Juniors.

Three in a row!!

The record setting Oxford Pirate football team didn't dissapoint their fans for the third year in a row. The Pirate Machine held together for one last game to a 14 to 6 win over Auburn.

Thanksgiving morning snow delayed the crush until the following Saturday, but regardless the pirates capped off a year of records and triumphs. Each step was a fight in the snow and ice conditions, but the pirates ran just enough to score and win.

The Pirates hold the Auburn News Trophy one more year and hope to gain the same satisfaction next year. The Ravelins staff gives a hats off to the team and we wish the best of luck to next year.

A Night Like No Other

Last year's Junior Prom was a night that created memories for everyone. The colors were emerald and silver, and the silver lighted up the entire cafeteria, defining the theme "Reflections". With the help of students from the shop classes, it was posible to have an arch covered with silver paper and silver and emerald balloons.

Finally, the hour of six came and everyone waited to have their picture taken by Keegan Photographers. After capturing the moments with pictures, some people had already started to shake it up with DJ Ken Duquette playing. The caterer, Jean's of Milford, served chicken cordon bleu or roast beef, roast potatoes, vegetables, fruit cup, salad, a dessert tray, and to top it all of, a punch fountain. The photographers, being the judges chose Ron Day as king and his court Jim Cameron, John Fredette, Mark Gardner, and Scott Renaud. The queen chosen was Tammy Brunetta along with her court Jessica Booth, Michelle Gedman, Linda Hubert, and Jennifer Wagner. The chosen King, Queen, and court had danced to the prom song "Lost in Your Eyes" with their escorts, and then had the group photos taken.

As the prom came to an end, everyone realized that these special memories will always last forever.

Spirited Election

This years Good Government Day election was highly spirited and competitive. The four candidates Amy Burdett, Scott Comptois, Bonnie Gardner and Jennifer Ivascyn, all lead a firece campaign to see who would visit the state house. They would then observe how the government is run for a day.

After all the ballots were finally counted, Jennifer Ivascyn was declared the winner, with Amy Burdett the alternate.

Look Into My Eyes....

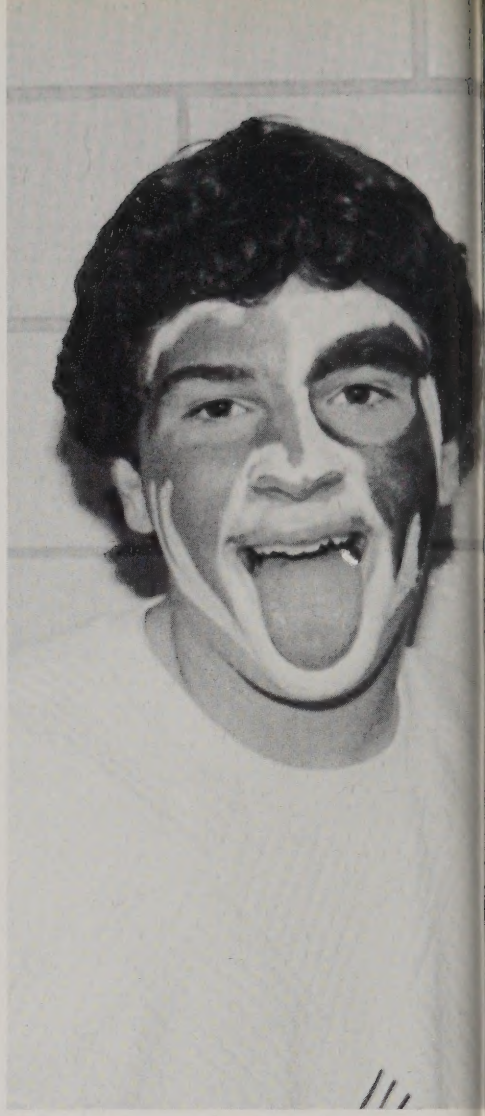
Each year, the psychology classes are visited by a hypnotist. Several students are chosen to go on stage, and then undergo hypnosis. This always brings lots of laughs to the audience, as the people on stage do things that they may not normally do. This year featured Linda Hubert dancing on stage, and Alan Berube, Bill Potter, and Ron Day in a "special" type of dance. It was great fun for everyone, and afterwards the participants were able to see themselves on videotape.

Maximum Pumptitude

Each year the Senior class is treated to a breakfast on Halloween by the faculty. The class was treated to pancakes, sausage and orange juice. This year they had outrageous costumes ranging from Teddy Bears to Tag Team Wrestling stars. Hans and Frans appeared, and as well there were quite a few cross-dressers. The Junior class put on a skit about the Senior class, and afterwards The Shirelles came to perform. They performed several numbers, and then started their road trip around the school.

Before returning to a regular school day, the Seniors had a brief meeting, and the first reality that they were in fact seniors struck. They were fitted for caps and gowns.

After all was cleaned up, the day was considered a success. The Seniors enjoyed themselves and would like to express their thanks to the faculty for continuing this yearly tradition.



Entertainment for the senior class was provided by the Shirelles consisting of Jen Ivascyn, Kathy Cummins and Bonnie Gardner.

XCeptional

When approached with the idea of deciding upon who the yearbook should be dedicated to, the staff had to consider many factors. Teachers not only teach in the classroom but outside the school as well.

When someone is selected for this particular honor, it means they have excelled in their position and have performed above and beyond what is expected of them. This year's dedication was selected due to leadership qualities and the ability to challenge the minds of students. Presenting students with problems and expecting solutions was a common practice. We cannot remember thinking harder in any other class. This person has been a great influence upon our lives as well as having touched in some way all the students at Oxford High School. Giving the best, this person in return deserves the best. We have yet to meet a harder working individual than Mrs. Kathy Threadgould.

The Fast Lane ! ! !

The car. That simple, 3 letter word symbolizes many things to seniors at Oxford High School; thoughts such as freedom, independence, and responsibility. Driving and owning your own car is a dream some students have had since grade 8, when enviously watching the seniors drive their cars. No more hurrying to the bus when the bell rings. Can anyone forget the excitement of receiving their driver's license, the thrill of that first drive to school, and then showing off to friends? The first trip to the movies, out to eat, or just to cruise around town -it was the first time you had the feeling of control. No parents to meet and no fear of being late.

Cars are students' first steps towards independence. Every student eagerly anticipates his or her first car, the symbol of freedom.

A Class Act

Five years ago when we first entered high school, the class of 1990 was a group of very disorganized kids. We had no idea what was going on around us, and we all felt lost in the sea of upperclassmen.

Mrs. Casavant is the one woman who helped us make the transition from immature eighth-graders to young adults. When we needed an advisor, she was there for us, and to this day she is still there always ready to lend a helping hand. Mrs. Casavant let us come to her with our own ideas which have developed into memories that will be cherished forever. The class of 1990 would like to thank Mrs. Casavant for all the guidance and hard work she has offered us throughout our high school years. Without her love, care, and understanding, this class would definately not be the same. Thank you, Mrs.C. We love you!

Senior class members attempt to talk Mrs. Casavant into their latest scheme.

Mrs. Schur, as usual, takes time to smile for everyone.

ear Juniors,

At Oxford High School, there will be many decisions facing you. Do I leave the eigth-grader alone, or do cut him in the line for soda? Should I ring my Batman lunch box or my Teenge Mutant Ninja Turtles? Although these ecisions will shape your future, there is ill one final choice awaiting you-COLEGE! Each year, the students here grapple with this terrifying choice. As the existing Seniors, we have found the following reminders to be invaluable!

1. Find out the SAT and ACT test dates as soon as possible. Don't be caught by a last minute deadline.
2. Read through your college mail during the summer. Once fall arrives, you may not have the time.
3. Interviews and visits! The only way to be sure a college is for you is to visit. Be sure to set these times up as soon as possible.
4. Remember, college will be home for the next few years, the population, setting, and activities will all have a great influence on you.
5. Lastly, never let the cost deter you from applying to a college. Financial aid and government loans are available. It isn't always as hopless as it seems.

Good Luck,

George

Sugar Babies

This year the school system put the Juniors through another year of health. In addition to the class they took in prior years, this class taught about drug awareness and teenage pregnancy.

One exercise Mrs. Lawrence had them do was to "marry" someone in their class, and then "have a baby". They did not, of course, have an actual baby, but rather a five pound bag of sugar.

At first this project was ridiculed and taken lightly by these "teenage parents", but after some time had elapsed the sugar went from " bags to babies". They wore diapers, clothes, and many parents put hair-dos and heads for the bags.

Some parents were the proud recipients of twins, while others were single parents. Mrs. Lawrence also made them keep track of a budget.

This exercise was designed to teach students that life is not easy, especially with another mouth to feed and carry around all day. For the most part, everyone was surprised at how seriously this project was taken.

Proud Pirates

Eric Evers, Junior Class President, had this to say about the year, "It was a great year for the Class of 1991, starting with Homecoming. The morning before the rally, we had a meeting to start work on our class cheer, more importantly, to get our class rings! The class was really brought together by getting our rings. At the pep rally, we took second place over all, beaten only by the Seniors. After Homecoming, our next big event was a first at Oxford High School: a Music Video Dance, "Dance Party OHS".

Another first for OHS happened in the Junior Health classes. Each student was matched up with a husband or wife, and given a five-pound bag of sugar as a "baby". There were some unmarried parents, and some were the proud parents of twins. Mrs. Lawrence designed the activity to show kids what it would be like to carry a baby around all day. All in all, even though our Junior Year was great, I say, 'You ain't seen nothing yet!'."

1989 has been an exciting year for the Sophomore class. We reached great heights at Homecoming and the Semi-formal was a great success. We also ordered our class rings and we are eagerly awaiting their arrival. The contributions from the students in our class activities has been tremendous and I look forward to a successful 1990 for our class.

Getting Closer

The freshmen class has changed much since last year. We have participated in more school activities and events. The members of our class try hard to be the best and show their spirit. We hope our sophomore year is as fun as our freshmen year was.

Little Eighth Graders

During our seventh grade tour, we were told that the high school was so scary and that every eighth grader got flushed. We were also asked if we wanted elevator and pool passes. When we got to the high school every staircase looked the same. Everyone looked ten feet taller than us. After cracking the schedule code and maping out our classes, we knew we going to be on our way to some of the best years of our lives.

In the first few weeks, we were phased by homecoming and the all new ideas of rallies. Our class has always been noisy so we fit right in. We had to admit that we were a nervous bunch the day of the Homecoming Rally. We made a good amount of money. Our class has some good athletes. Even the non-atheletes got involved in some of the clubs such as math and computer clubs. School work is a little bit harder here but the subjects are interesting so we really don't mind that much.

We have to thank the upperclassmen for guiding us through the first few weeks and the new experiences. Our class has a lot of spirit, especially for "little eighth graders". It's hard for us to understand why the eighth graders always get picked on but we guess it's a tradition and it will be passed on to every eighth grader to enter the halls of Oxford High!

The science department, found near the junior hall, is a world in itself. Students may take classes such as Earth Science, Biology, Chemistry, and Physics. In all these classes students learn the role of science in everyday life. More than that, each class has its own unique activity. Biology students make edible models of human cells, and go on safaris in the woods of Oxford. Biology II students celebrate the emergence of the shelled egg, as well as ring in the Chinese New Year.

Other options include a trip to Riverside for Physics students, and a Science Fair for Biology, Chemistry, and Physics students.

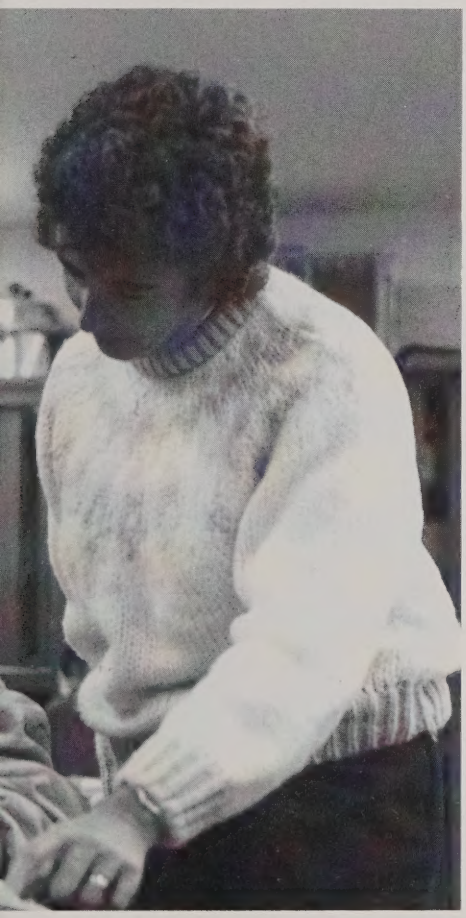
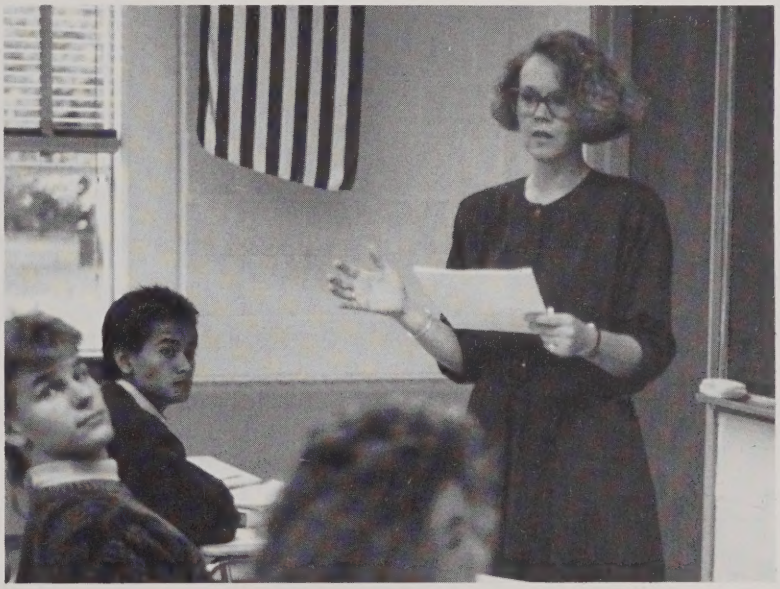
Knowing All the Angles

Miss Oinonen carefully labels a floppy disk.

A common question asked of math teachers is "Why? Why do we need to know this?" Without a solid math background, daily life would be confusing. The skills provided by our teachers will last through a lifetime. In geometry, projects are assigned. They show the role of math in daily life. Computers are also offered, and students are taught to program a computer. The equipment is state of the art.

Other possible courses include Trigonometry, where triangles are explained in depth. College Review Math gives Seniors a recap of all necessary skills. In addition, there are classes such as Consumer Math, which teaches basic math.





Mrs. Van Wart explains the day's work to her class.

Mr. Denson instructs his class about the order of operations.

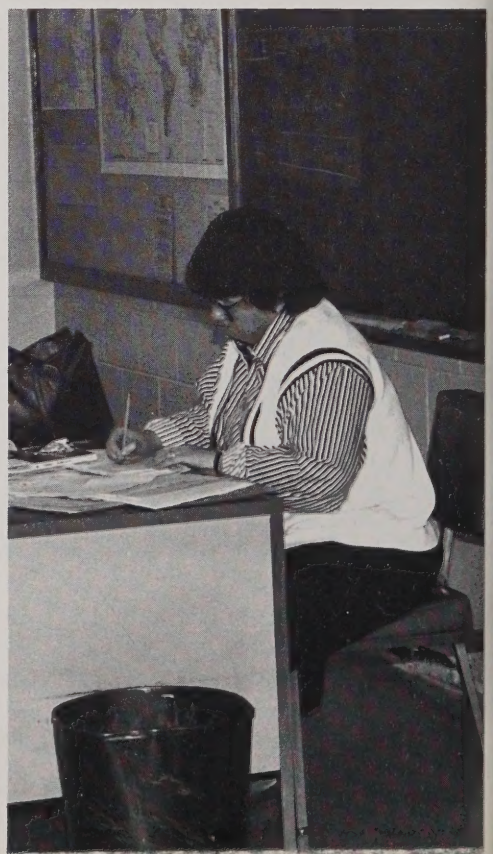
Tenses and Tales

The English Department teaches O.H.S.'s students a variety of skills. In eigth grade most students are taught grammar and vocabulary, and with each progressive year, new skills are taught. Students read classic novels as well as contemporary literature in their classes. These range from Julius Caesar to The Outsiders. Different courses include Journalism, Reading Insights, Business English, English Literature, American Literature, and Appreciation of Literature.

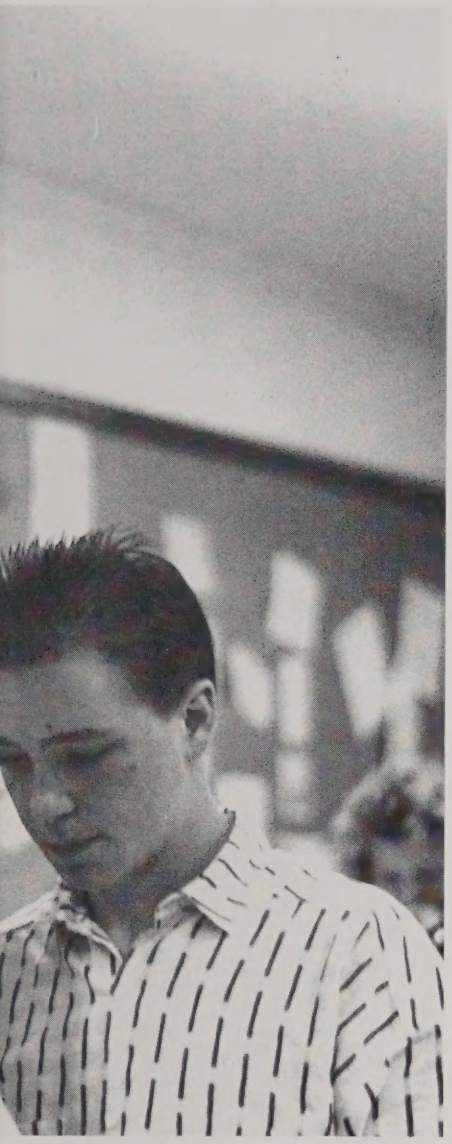
Other courses include Journalism, where students study the first amendment, write the Oxford Highlights column, and search for examples of fact and fiction in the newspaper. In Reading for Insight, students learn to read between the lines to better understand human nature. Business English students focus on grammar review and the study of short novels. Drama provides experience in oral communication as students learn to take themselves less seriously, especially when visiting the stage.

Mrs. Chamberlain points out to Crystal Swenson where they are in the book.

Mrs. Pietro asks a question, and Harry Richardson obligingly raises his hand.



Mrs. Fournier sits at her desk, correcting papers.



Minding Their Own Business

The business department offers many different courses to prepare students for the business world. Mr. Mullen and the rest of the department work hard to supply their students with the opportunity to experience the business world. For example, on October 18, business students visited Hebert's Candy Mansion in Shrewsbury to observe production. Not only did they get a better understanding of how business works, but many samples were enjoyed which sweetened the trip.

The business department also participates in many competitions each year. This is in an effort to sharpen each students skills. The competitions range from typing to accounting.

Miss Geenty passes out papers as Angela Marsiello sits patiently in her seat.

Mr. Hazelwood is found hard at work correcting papers.

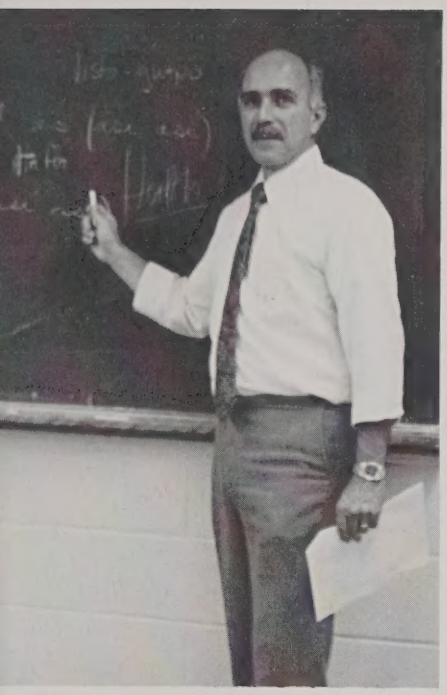
A Trip To the Past

Mr. Boucher and the rest of the Social Studies Department work very diligently to supply students with a very good understanding of history. Students have an ample supply of history courses to choose from, among them Early American, Ancient History, European History, and World Geography. Each year, the Early American History classes depart for Sturbridge Village to learn more about the lives and times of the settlers. The trip is usually highlighted by a stop at the bake shop, where students can purchase old fashion chocolate chip cookies.

Mrs. Blazis disregards Kurt Biando's grin and continues to talk.



Mr. Pietro shows his class the days lesson.

Miss Greene takes a moment from her lesson to see who is at the door.

Learning More Than A Language

This year was quite a year for the foreign language students. In addition to the annual trip to a French restaurant, they took a wonderful trip to Paris and Madrid in April. The students, along with Mrs. Blazis, went during April vacation for eight days. Except for a couple fundraisers, the students had to provide the money themselves. For those who did, it was well worth it.

In addition, the students visited art museums, and went to several plays in Boston.

DEADLINES!

The world of yearbooking is one of DEADLINES, PRESSURE, and STRESS! Most every day after school, the staff could be found in room 169, doing layouts, typing, or writing copy. When March 2, 1990, — the FINAL deadline — came around it was all worth it. The two Editors, Scott Comptois (Editor-in-Chief), and Jennifer Williams (Co-Editor), along with Melanie Devoe, attended a yearbook camp in July, where they stumbled upon a theme (after many, many hours of debate!). Work started in September, where they then met with their staff. Soon, photographers could be found patrolling the school, snapping pictures. The work involved long hours, and a fair share of headaches. One could often hear cries of "Why me?" come from the room. The dedication and perseverance of the staff continued, however, and work continued. For all those involved, it was with both a sigh of relief and a sense of great accomplishment that the book was completed.

Noteworthy

This year's Senior chorus consists of seniors, juniors, sophomores and a few freshmen. Activities this year included the annual Christmas concert, the variety show, the spring concert, and the annual trip to Boston to sing at Faneuil Hall.This was due to the hard work and dedication of Mr. Madge.

The freshman chorus is comprised of eighth graders, who, opposite every gym period, spend their time with Mr. Madge. Their songs this year included "Kokomo", "America", and "No School Tomorrow". This last one had special effects, as students waved flags in spirit with the song.

Drilling to the Top

The drill team was advised this year by Mrs. Ledoux, and the captain was Karen Kelly.

The girls practiced their routine often, and were able to coordinate their routine with the band. They participated in field events and parades. Karen Kelly had this to say of the year, "I think we did a spectacular job of coordinating our group with the band. All of us, with the cheerleaders, made a contribution to the success of our football team".

Works of Art

O.H.S. students can take a break from the day of note-taking with a hands-on experience such as Home Economics Art, or Industrial Arts. Each of these departments offers a variety of levels and courses. Currently the Home Ec. department offers Foods I, Clothing I, II, and III, Child Development, and Parent Skills. The Art department offers Art 8, Art I; Basic Drawing, Art II; Experience Media, Art III; Advanced Media, and Art IV; Portfolio.

The Industrial Arts department offers Wood I-IV, Technical Drawing I-IV, and Graphic Arts I + II. Graphic Arts has also developed a new program called Technology Education: Comunications. This class uses state-of-the-art equipment in Desktop Publishing.

XCellent Achievement

Every year, individuals receive recognition in various areas, including academics and music. Bonnie Gardner received the Bausch and Lomb Science Award for being the highest ranking junior in science. She received the privilege of participating in Girls' State as she was the highest ranking girl in the class. Alan Berube received the Boys' State Award for being among the top two ranked boys in his class, as did Jon Fredette.

Jennifer Ivascyn was elected by the student body as the Good Government Day Representative. She spent a day in Boston as an acting official. In addition, she was elected by fellow Seniors as the Daughters of the American Revolution candidate for her outstanding citizenship.

Four members of the band were accepted into the District band; Alan Berube on euphonium, Dawn Kudron on trumpet, and Sarah Thibodeau and Melanie Devoe on clarinet. Three members of the chorus, Michelle Chaplain, Paula Kneeland, and Jennifer Trumbull were also accepted. In addition, Alan Berube and Jennifer Trumbull were accepted into All-State Band and Chorus.

Project Cope

From 8 AM to 2 PM most school days, the students of Project Cope (Community Occupational Placement Experience) are busy in their classrooms. A program of the Southern Worcester County Educational Collaborative, Cope teaches students who learn more slowly than others, skills necessary for everyday life. These tasks include consumer skills and skills necessary for holding a job. Each student is assisted individually by teachers and classroom aides and tutors. In addition to the academic work, Project Cope participates in real work experiences at selected sites in the community. Some have finished school and are out working full time.

The students at Project Cope have become actively involved in school activities. They are present at pep rallies, assemblies, and elections. They are certainly proving they have plenty of school spirit and are glad to be at Oxford High School.

The program provides occupational instruction in the areas of Computer Maintenance and Repair, Horticulture/Agriculture, Distributive Education, Word Processing, and Building Construction/Maintenance. An academic component provides an individualized academic program for each student, while each occupational program is designed to operate as a small business. Project COFFEE services 130 students from nineteen surrounding communities. Project COFFEE has twice been validated by the U.S. Department of Education, and has received two Presidential Citations for Private Sector initiative.

Kelly Miller was the President, Linda Stake, Vice-President, Jennifer Witkowski, Secretary , and Jessica Whitmore, Treasurer. The Student Council coordinates the school's events, and hold the annual Homecoming dance. They sponsored a dinner for the senior citizens, and also held an annual food and clothing drive. In addition, they went to a convention in March at Cape Cod.

Creme de la Creme

The four requirements for National Honor Society induction are service, scholarship, character, and leadership. Any student, at the end of sophomore year, who meets these requirements is eligible.

This year, the National Honor Society had a more visible role. In the fall, officers were elected. They were Stacy Belliveau, President; Alan Berube, Vice-President; John Berube, Junior Vice-President; Debby Dziembowski, Treasurer; and Amy Burdett; Secretary.

At Christmastime, the members played "Secret Santa" to the teachers. They left surprise gifts, sent cards, and even decorated classrooms, all without revealing their identity. In March, they hosted a ball for the Senior Citizens and even learned to line dance for the occasion. These activities helped to bring the NHS more into the public eye.

The members of the computer club can be found nearly every afternoon in the computer room, using their skills.

Under the direction of President Russ Peters, along with Vice-President Eric Evers, SEcretary Alan Ayotte, and Treasurer Jodi Richards, the club sponsore its annual mystery match.In addition, Christmas they sponsored a send acandy-cane sale, where students cou send a candy cane to whomever the wished. These were sent the Friday b fore vacation.

Adding up to Success

This year's math team was forced to cope without the strong performances of last year's seniors, but eryone put forth a great effort under essure. Another factor working against em was the loss of their coach, Mrs. inney, for the first half of the year. The am's performance at the first two meets, considering its handicaps, was a definite accomplishment. Senior team members Alan Berube, Jodi Richards, Melanie Devoe, Dawn Kudron, Bonnie Gardner, and Jennifer Williams provided the bulk of the scoring, while junior member Eric Evers proved to be a leading force.

On The Rocks

Technical Rock Climbing is not an easy sport. The challanges are never ending, the rewards ever increasing.

Those who climb, do so with many doubts : do I have the strength and stamina to climb? How will I overcome my fear of height? Do I trust others?

Climbing is the breaking of many fears we all have. To do so, the climber experiences a feeling that is rarely duplicated.

The club is made up of second semester sophomores, juniors, and seniors. The students have to learn to trust one another, as these people literally have their life in their hands. This factor is what has made the club so successsful. There is a closeness between the students that is rarely experienced in any other sport.

Marching On and Off the Field

After 1989's very successful trip to Orlando, Florida, the O.H.S. Band readied itself for a less hectic year. Marching season was highlighted by the band's first trip to a regular season away game in four years. A few of the songs performed were "Conga", "Sir Duke", and a favorite among the band members and the crowd, "Kokomo". The annual holiday concert drew one of the largest crowds in recent memory, and no one present was disappointed. The performance was followed by another annual tradition, the music department's annual Christmas party. In addition to music and food, the seniors presented directors Mr. Madge and Mr. Gilman with Christmas presents. The band's main task in the spring was its preparation for an exchange concert with the Alden, N.Y. High School Band. Each band spent a weekend at the other's school, as two combined concerts were performed: one in Alden and one in Oxford. Both concerts proved to be a tremendous success, and they served to complete a great year for the 1989-90 O.H.S. Band.

Leading the Spirit...

The cheerleading squad went through many exciting and fun times as well as a few problems. Many members from last year had stepped down for personal reasons. Since this was a young squad, they felt as if they had to prove something; and they did! They met new challenges and overcame them.

Heidi Alexander and Kelly Carbonneau had this to say about the seaon, " Our captain for football season was Jodie Ricketts, and for the basketball season we alternated each game. We practiced five days a week, from 2 to 3:30, and before pep rallies and the tournament we had extra long practices. We learned dedication.

On November 26, 1989, we attended a tournament in Lowell. To prepare for this, we had the assistance of our cheerleading coach, Mrs. Limpicki. The tournament was definately a learning experience. We placed 6th.

Some of our unforgettable times have included pep rallies, roses from the football players, being loud, losing our voices, doing the splits in the mud, and cheering in rain and on ice."

Record Setters

The 1989 season was a season of records. The Oxford Pirate Football Team crashed through the records books on nearly every game. Coach Doldoorian lead the pirates to a nine win, one loss season.

Team captains Stanley Kasper, Jeff Clarkson, Chris Stone, Ron Day, Mike Stott and Scott Renaud led their team to victory after victory. Each win led to even greater stakes, and incredible spirit throughout the school. Attendance records were set at the Northbridge game where over 5,000 fans came to cheer the two teams on. The Pirates capped off the season by defeating the Auburn Dandies for the third year in a row on Thanksgiving.

With the season past the 1989 Pirates will remain the best football team ever to hit Oxford. Until a better team comes along, these guys remain the Oxford High Champs.

Fielding Off Opponents

It was a year of rebuilding for this year's field hockey team. It was led by tri-captains Amy Burdett, Chrystal LaPierre, and Pam Wray, along with the talent of Senior Jessica Berry.

Despite displaying a final record of 4-11-3, the girls worked hard and learned to adjust to one another. The team had only 4 returning seniors, 5 juniors, 3 sophomores, and 5 freshman. The youthfullness of this varsity team makes the outlook very promising for future seasons.

Dribbles, Dunks, and Dives

The 1989-90 boys basketball team finished the season 4-13. Although the team finished with a losing record, the Pirates were in several games providing the fans with something to cheer about. Senior captain, Larry Bray, finished the season strong averaging double figures in the last four games.

Sophomore Mike Sampson fed the team averaging 17.4 ppg. With only the loss of Bray, the returning team looks bright.

We're Done

Through all the days of my short-lived life, I've faced many challenges, but completing the yearbook on time was the greatest challenge ever. Great organization skills and a broad sense of yearbook knowledge is required.

Though we encountered troubled waters, we pulled together and accomplished our goals.

I'd personally like to thank everybody who helped to make Ravelins' '90 possible. At times I wondered why I set myself up for such a chore, but in the end the feeling of accomplishment was rewarding enough.

Though I challenged the limits of my sanity, I'm proud to have served as Ravelins' Editor-in-Chief. Now I have the final word, DONE. — Scott Comptois

Working on the yearbook has been quite an experience! From September to March, my life has been one of deadlines, last minute crisis, and stress. When the book was finally put in my hands, however, the feeling of accomplishment made any sacrifice worthwhile.

I'd like to thank those who wrote copy (often under pressure), and those who came to help after school. Everyone involved should be proud of their "XC"eptional efforts in making this book the "XC"ellent one it is. As Scott says, "Though I challenged the limits of my sanity", I am proud to have served as the Co-editor of the Ravelins'. — Jennifer Williams
